NOTABLE WEDDINGS

Miss Riley and Miss Fuller Married Amidst Hosts of Friends

THE SPRING SOCIAL SEASON.

Ers. Whittemore's Dancing Reception for Yale Boys-Society Out in Force Last Night-A Brilliant Wedding Today-Personal Notes of Interest.

The wedding of Miss Fanny Reid Riley, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Riley, to Dr. Chas. Read Collins at Ascension Church at high noon today was a spectacle made all the more brilliant by the gloom of the day. The chancel was effectively decorated with palms and Easter lilies and the grouping of the bridal party during the brief ceremony made a picture which will linger long in the memories of those present. The ushers, Mr. B. S. Munn, Mr. Robinson Riley, Mr. Roy Stemson, Dr. Deale, Dr. Melvillo and Dr. Duncan McKim were kept bnsy seating the guests. They headed the bridsl procession to the altar, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Nina Gaines of Warrenton, Miss Faunt Le Roy of Baltimore, Miss Porter of Baltimore, Miss Cabell, Miss Darneille and Miss Stansbury. The maid of honor, Miss Ellen Riley, just preceded the bride, who entered with her father. The groom and his best man, Mr. Chas. W. Field of Baltimore, awaited them at the chancel. Rev. John Elliet.

About one hundred and fifty of the children from the Washington City Orphan Asylum, of which Dr. Collins is an attendant physician, were present at the wedding. Just before the bride came boxes of wedding cake were distributed among them by Miss Mary Randolph. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast, to which over three hundred guests were asked, followed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Riley, No. 8 Lowe circle. The suite of drawing rooms were fragrantly decorated with roses, a wreath of them encircling the wedding cake on the dining room table. Dr. and Mrs. Collins stood in the palm-decked recess of the bay window to receive congratulations.

Boxes of wedding care were taken away by the guests. Toward the latter part of the re-ception the bridal party enjoyed their break-fast, at which the bridesmaids cake, with its ring, its thimble and coin, was cut. When Dr. and Mrs. Collins started on their ng trip the traveling dress of the bride was a smart costume of gray tweed. When they return they will go to housekeeping at 1125 14th street, the house being a gift to the bride from her father. She received over a hundred superb presents, which her friends have enjoyed viewing. Among the invited guests were Gen. and Mrs. Thompson. Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. resume her Wednesdays as mondent.

When the newly married couple were about to come down the aisle again Miss Jane Fuller pushed back her sister's veil, so that everybody could see the happy face it had shielded.

Very shortly afterward the guests had all met again in the drawing room of the Fuller residence. The bride and groom took up their station under a palm leaf canopy arranged at one of the east windows. The ruby plush curtains formed the back ground and short draperies formed of ropes of smiles hung from the arch of palm leaves. Over their heads was a monogram F. B. in white roses and pansies.

Out in the hallway, facing every one as they entered, the same monogram was wrought out in pink and white tulips, and in the drawing room over the mantel it was again presented in jonquils and narcissus.

As the guests came down stairs the Chief Justice and Mrs. Fuller met them near the drawing room door, and with them stood Mrs. Aubrey, their youngest married daughter, and her husband. They were presented to their guests, very few of whom knew Mrs. Aubrey before her marriage.

Mrs. Fuller were a manve silk and chiffon triamed with silver. Mrs. Aubrey were rose pink creps. It took home time in the crowded rooms to cross over to where the bride and groom were waiting to receive congratulations. They were kept busy and did not desert their glost until about 10 o'clock.

The wedding gown was of shiny white satin. It had a deep flounce of embroidered chiffon across the front of the skirt. The waist was high, having a medicis collar of silver passementerie. It had somewhat of the jacket effect, the box-pleated ruffle around the waist line being embroidered, like the front of the corage, in silver true lovers' knots. The sleeves were long and had soft folds of chiffon let in slashes, which gave a high effect on the shoulders. Her veil was edged with a narrow lace and fell from the head from under a chaplet of orange blossoms. Her bonquet of lilies of the valley had a few pink orchids in it.

When she was ready to leave her father's house she came ready for the shower of rice, dressed in a dark blue and tan cloth traveling dress. The pelting of rice was extremely liberal and gave the participants a good deal more amusement than the recipients. The next few days will be spent in New York and vicinity and on Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Brown will sail for Europe. They will be gone six weeks and in that time will visit in Berlin, Munich, Paris and London. Their future home will be in Chicago. Only Mr. Edward Brown, the groom's brother and his wife of the Brown family, came on to the wedding.

The bride's presents have been only shown to the bride, who entered with her father. The groom and his best man, Mr. Chas. W. Field of Battimore, awaited them at the chancel. Rev. John Elliott, D.D., performed the marriage ceremony.

The bride's gown was extremely elegant. It was of soft white faille, and across the hem in front was a flounce of white chiffon. The bodice had jacket ends formed of a deep flounce of duchess lace showed the neck slightly, and lesses the sever, and the see were long. Whittemore gave a dancing party in their honor, which had the pleasant effect of bringing together for the delectation of these favored thirty-three young gentlemen a company of some of the most charming young ladies in society. The evening began late, as those who went to the concert did not reach Mrs. Whittemore's until nearly 11 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Whittemore had themselves time to go and pay their congratulations to the bride and groom at the Fuller mansion, and were then at home ready to meet their young guest long before any came. But when they did come they came in large groups and a few minutes after 11. The spacious drawing rooms on both sides of the halls and the halls, too, were filled with dancers. A pretty compliment to the special guests was a huge Y in blue and white flowers hanging on the wall in the hall. The musicians were stationed in the tower window behind a hedge of hydrangeas and palms. On the mantels were vases of long-stemmed roses, the chandeliers were garlanded with ropes of carnations tied in with asparagus vine, and a gen-

A dispatch from Boston today says Mrs. James R. McKee, daughter of President Harrison, who has been at the Vendome several days, has been the recipient of many social attentions and was given an elegant breakfast at the Bellevue yesterday noon. The breakfast room was profusely decorated with potted palms, ferns and other tropical plants and the table was a study in artistic arrangement of elegant china, glass, silver and flowers. At each one of the fourteen covers was laid an Easter hily tied with broad white satin ribbon. These lilies were filled with tiny flowers and the name of each guest was painted on the ribbon in colors to harmonize with the flower selected for her. Last evening a dinner was given in honor of Mrs. McKee at the Hotel Brunswick by Mrs. Charles A. Coffin. Sixtoen guests were present.

addition to the disaster at Manipur it is

The Bengal infantry detachment and the eighty Goorkhas, it appears, were set upon by the Assamese or native troops referred to while passing through a difficult and dangerous passage, and though they fought gallantly against heavy odds the rebel tribesmen, from the advantageous positions which they occupied on the sides of the pass and ahead and behind the British force, poured such a destructive fire into the ranks of the Bengalese and Goorkhas that the latter are said to have been killed to a man. believed that a force of British troops, com-Managing Editor-to applicant for place Do you ever get off any jokes on that time tried, fire-tested subject the mother-in-law?"

tory of Tenleytown, for it witnessed the grand opening of their much-needed hall that is to be used for school purposes and entertainments. Draped in starry bunting and illuminated by hundreds of electric lights, it towered above the surrounding houses.

Around the walls on the inside were ranged numerous stands on which were sundry articles for sale and presided over by pretty girls, whose bright smiles lured many a dime from male pocketbooks. Dancing was indulged in on the second floor to the music of a fine orchestra. The people of Tenleytown are justly proud of their hall. Much of the credit due for its erection belongs to Father Barry, the pastor of the Cathelic church there, who never tired proclaiming the necessity of such a structure, both from the pulpit and on his daily rounds, until he had gained the consent and assistance of his parishioners. The festivities will be continued the balance of the week and the proceeds will go toward the payment of the debt incurred in the building of it. ceived.

The grip and complications of grip and pneumonia are apparently becoming more prevalent. From Saturday noon until last evening there were ninety deaths reported from those causes. The number of deaths reported yesterday was almost one-fourth as large as the entire list of last week and was just one-fourth of the number of deaths of the week before. Of the deaths last week seventy were directly due to the grip and there were 240 deaths from pneumonia. The proportionate number of old people who died was unusually large.
